

Steritech is an Australian company that specialises in offering contract treatment services. For over 40 years, Steritech has provided sterilisation and decontamination solutions to many different industries and offers Australia's only contract Gamma Irradiation processes as well as Ethylene Oxide Gas Fumigation.

The Gamma Service provided by Steritech plays a very important part in their pet product customers' supply chains.

The need for treatment is generally required when a customer must meet quarantine requirements or when they have a production issue that Steritech can resolve. For example, E-Coli, Salmonella, Listeria, Bird Flu, pathogens, mould, insects and pests are eliminated using Steritech's Gamma Service.

When imported product requires treatment prior to entry into Australia, Steritech is relied upon to conduct pre-entry treatment. All Steritech's processes are Biosecurity approved. Additionally, customers utilise Steritech's Gamma Service, prior to leaving Australia, in order to meet the quarantine conditions of the country of destination.

Raw materials used in the manufacturing process are also commonly treated when a level of sterility is required or when a contamination issue is found.

The Gamma process is chemical free, so there are no residuals

The logistics of getting your product from warehouse to customer is hard enough at the best of times.

When you have production issues or quarantine requirements added into the mix, you need an experienced company that can help.

or post-treatment quarantine periods required. In most situations, product can be treated in its finished packaging and within their shipper cartons ready for distribution. It is also a cold process, meaning no heat is transferred to the product.

Steritech is frequently approached by customers who have product or market access issues they are not able to resolve. Whether they have or haven't used the Gamma Service before, Steritech will always work closely with their customers to find ways to deliver the solution they are looking for.

Samples of product can be treated to see if the process will be effective in helping the customer. This is very beneficial to customers as it allows them to test the process first and assess the results.

With 3 sites in Australia, situated in Dandenong Vic, Wetherill Park NSW and Narangba Qld, Steritech is well positioned to work with new and existing customers to help open new pathways to market, help protect their product or simply consider using the service in place of another method. ■
